

to the surviving remnant of an ancient order of priesthood, called Kamas, which, by constant intermarriage within their own caste, has dwindled down to a few individuals, diminutive in stature, and imbecile in intellect. Their heads and faces resemble exactly the figures on the bas-reliefs on the temple ruins described in Stevens' Central America. They are orphans, and at the close of a war between two of the Aztec tribes, fell into the hands of a traveller named Hammond. They are lively, playful and affectionate, but attempts to teach them a word of English have thus far proved unsuccessful; but they occasionally utter a few gibberish sounds.—Boston Post.

WHEELING BRIDGE CASE.—The Cincinnati Commercial of Friday says:—"Chancellor Walworth is now at the Burnett House in this city to take depositions in the matter of the Wheeling bridge case. The appointment of the Chancellor is for the purpose of taking depositions not only in this city but in all the river cities, and to report all the proceedings and examinations to the Supreme Court of the United States. Stanton, Attorney for the State of Pennsylvania, arrived some days since, and the Attorney for the Bridge arrived yesterday afternoon in the Hibernia. So matters are progressing rapidly.

Jamaica.—Mr. Bigelow, of the Evening Post, of New York, has recently published his experience and observations in Jamaica, showing the effects of sixteen years freedom in a slave colony. Mr. B. ascribes the decline in prosperity and wealth on that island not to the abolition of slavery, but to the absenteeism of the principal proprietors, and in their extravagance, by which almost the whole island became heavily mortgaged, the British colonial system, the abrogation of the colonial protective duties, and the large size of the estates generally. The proportion of the island under cultivation is lessening day by day, and notwithstanding the unequalled climate, soil and productions of Jamaica, almost everything is imported, and provisions are extraordinarily high.
